Address to C. S. D. R. Graduating Class, June 11, 1958

By Senator Nelson S. Dilworth

R. BRILL, graduating class, honored faculty, friends and guests.

I come to you on this happy occasion in a spirit of humility and appreciation that you have invited me to share a few thoughts with you. This appreciation is the more serious and heartfelt when I consider that in this graduating class of senior students you are giving your best to the future service of our country in good citizenship and loyal interest in maintaining our American free and popular form of government.

We are met here for a very special reason tonight, because of our special interest in a special group, this graduating class. They are obviously an intelligent and capable group. The school is justly proud of them and their accomplishments. Their families may take the deepest pride and satisfaction in them tonight.

The persistent efforts of many people have contributed to the well planned organization of this school to bring you successfully to this graduation tonight. All of our public schools are supported by taxation. Then there are those in this community who have contributed of their time and talent to bring more cultural advantages to this and to the other schools in this area. I hope we all appreciate the delightful surroundings that have been established here in Riverside by the people of this and the pioneer generations that have preceded us.

Years ago I wondered why they called a graduation a "commencement." Of course, now I realize that it is a commencement of life in a larger sphere of activity for all of this class.

The attitude of the good people a few years ago on the Committee of the Deaf, reminds me of the little girl of eight years who had pulled a playmate to safety who had been drowning in deep water. Her neighbors had bought a beautiful gold medal. A huge throng filled the school auditorium for the presentation. Great speeches had been made praising the little girl for her heroism and courage. The mother of the little one who had been

It is not of these simple methods of learning rescued pinned the medal on the heroine's dress and then a man shoved a big microphone in the girl's face and demanded a speech. She gasped for breath and then stammered, "It was easier to jump in than to stay on the bank and do nothing." So I say to you tonight, it was easier for some of these people interested in deaf children a few years ago, to jump in and do something to bring their plans for a special school to a reality, than it was for them to sit at home in leisure and comfort and do nothing.

Let's make it really a commencement tonight, a commencement of a larger life of achievement. Life to yield enduring satisfaction must be a process of ever learning more and more about this big world and about ourselves and our friends. This process of learning, of acquiring information and skill should continue through all of our active years. To continue to learn year after year is to grow in intelligence and usefulness.

A much publicized doctor of education built a book around the theme, "We Learn What We Live." That may be true but I would call it learning by experience. All of us young and old do that. Even animals learn by experience. A young pup may tackle a skunk once but seldom does he need a second lesson.

As intelligent humans, we should learn by observing the experiences of others, we should learn by observation. I am sure you all have done that, parents, families, graduating class and teachers. Learning by observation saves you the hard knocks of experience. It is often said that experience is a dear teacher, a costly means of learning, costly in life and treasure. When we watch the other fellow get a burned finger or a bad fall, we learn to be more careful ourselves without the burn or the fall.

Then there is the third means of learning by the spoken word or communication of others, who give us their knowledge by personal communication of various means. There are many things that you may never have done but with careful directions you may safely attempt to do with confidence in your success.

that I wish to talk about tonight. These methods that I have mentioned are universal, in homes as well as in schools, in mountains as well as in cities, but all of these methods of learning are limited by your surroundings.

I come now to the limitless means of learning that lifts you out of your locality and brings the whole world within your reach, that liberates you from the limitation of poverty, if you are so limited, and opens the vast storehouses of the world's knowledge to your eyes, a method of learning that can carry you back through the ages of time to the treasures of history and the glory of Rome, to the majesty of ancient Athens and the wonders of Egypt of five thousand years ago. I speak of books.

The greatest invention of the mind of man was the alphabet that enabled him to write thoughts. Ever since the century in which God gave the ten commandments on tablets of stone to Moses, mankind has used letters and has been able to write thoughts. Previous to that time all knowledge had to be preserved in living minds that perished with each life.

By books we can learn better methods of farming. By books we can learn how to build a dam and harness a mighty river. By books you can learn how to make wise laws and govern a great nation. By books you can learn God's laws and his plans for men here and in the land that is fairer than day.

Books mean freedom, freedom from place, freedom from time, freedom from circumstance, because, wisely chosen, they enable you to change your circumstances. Buy good books, borrow good books, read good books, study good books, and the greatness of other men will be yours and your achievements may well exceed theirs.

Cast off the dragging weight of the idea that you can learn only by experience. Real progress has its beginnings in the progress of your mind. Out of your mind's progress comes your future deeds.

Ability to master and to use the contents of a book has to be acquired. It must be taught diligently all through the school years or some will miss this priceless privilege in life.

Learn to master a good book. Absorb its contents into your mind, take its teaching and wisdom into your memory and make it your own. This is one thing that schools should teach you to do at the earliest possible age.

Books have made America great. American enterprise has made books cheap, within the reach of the poorest. Abraham Lincoln, the backwoods boy, acquired a copy of the Bible and studied it diligently and made its principles his own. He borrowed a life of George Washington and learned it page by page and he became as great a man as Washington. Such is the power of books.

Good books written by free Americans who are in love with American ideals and freedoms are the inspiration of men the world around to be free. Books enable large numbers of men and women to understand great issues and vote wisely to preserve our free country. Freedom of neither mind nor body can exist today without good books.

Even those who would destroy our freedom and are trying to do so, recognize the power of books and use them to spread their deceit and falsehoods. The best answer is good books on our thrilling history and national achievements. The virtue and benefits of freedom will always win out if properly told. The pen is in truth mightier than the sword.

Books have released American ingenuity and skill until we in America produce and consume more goods, food, clothing, shelter and luxury than all the teeming millions of Europe and Asia combined. Our standard of living is the envy of the world. We are one fifteenth the population of the world, but we buy and consume one third of the meat of the world, one half of the shoes, and four fifths of the automobiles. Clothing is purchased with the wages of one third the hours of labor of the most favored country in the eastern world. American homes are four times as large in square feet of modern shelter per family as any European people's homes and our homes are filled with labor saving devices unknown elsewhere. These evidences of good living are distributed to the greatest percentage of our people ever achieved by any people in any time.

The world now is witnessing a competitive race in science and production between America and the free world on one side against the totalitarian countries behind the iron curtain. It is a competition of total population skill. Every well trained American strengthens our free world. Every skilled American increases America's production capacity in the struggle for continued freedom.

Our Declaration of Independence is a reverent document based on expressed belief in God. This foundation of American institutions is challenged today by growing numbers of those who depend on class antagonism to be a challenge? We must meet it with the truth, the whole truth about America and our way stronger force. And how shall we meet this of life and the sacrifices and struggles to achieve it.

Communism is an idea. It can not be destroyed with bullets and bombs alone. We must meet it with better ideas, ideas of freedom, ideas of liberty, justice, morality, patriotism and faith. This is a battle of words to prevent communist control of the minds of all men. We must never forget that our most precious weapon is the truth about our history and about the competing ideologies of the day. But we must speak out and tell how these ideologies have worked out in the lives of the common people who live under their dominion and are subject to their power in their everyday lives.

Every government exercises power over the reckless persons who would trespass on the freedom of their neighbors. So our government exercises the power of restraint over the trespasser, criminal or civil, to guarantee the enjoyment of freedom to the peace-loving citizen. Freedom and anarchy can never exist together. Authority is necessary for the enjoyment of freedom. That authority in America has been limited by the Constitution to the beneficial fields of activity that increases the enjoyment of liberty and the opportunity for prosperity.

The American people have reserved to themselves the final decision as to who holds the authority of public office and the people have sharply limited the power of public officials. This is the new concept of government and freedom developed in our Declaration and Constitution and put into practice for 170 years by loyal Americans, actively loyal in peace as in war. All this we will celebrate in a few days on our national Independence Day anniversary.

There can be no enduring republic in America operating in constitutional liberty to express the will of the people unless we have citizens and leaders who are devoted to the republic and who have been well taught in their youth all the methods and necessary means of preserving freedom. I can not think of a nation worthy of the name but which has been builded on the patriotism of its people, particularly its young people. I can name many nations that have been quickly pillaged and destroyed when their people lost the ideals of patriotism and service to their country. When the youth of any land refuse sacrificial service to their country the end of that nation hastens on apace.

All of you have this obligation to serve your country in peace. First as an intelligent citizen, informing ourselves daily on the conduct of the affairs of our nation, our state, and our community. Each of you should prepare yourself persistently to be a competent judge of the performance of each of your public officials. You will have to learn to evaluate information that comes to you, whether it be propaganda for a purpose or factual and true.

An honest public official has to contend with selfish groups,—with spoilsmen and the advocates of unwise or foolish policies. These influences can drive out of office a public servant of discretion and good judgment unless there are a majority of wide awake and informed citizens who know the facts. Such citizens are the basic foundation of good government.

We can all do this for America. The historic decisions of the America government are made in the various election districts by the people. At Sacramento and at Washington we just add up the score and declare the result in legislation.

America needs you to be an alert and informed judge of public affairs. For the sake of your future you can do no less.

In closing may I speak of a bank that cannot be broken by a panic, a bank that robbers cannot crack. It is worthy of the savings of every youth. It is your own mind.

Store in it the treasures of the best books of history and science, the higher skills of our day and the best techniques of human relations. No one can take from you knowledge stored in your mind.

Although this may be farewell to school days for you at the California School in Riverside, let's not say good bye. Come back often to Riverside to greet friends, and may God bless and care for you all your days.

Captioned Films Bill Passed

Last year at a PTCA meeting the group was asked to write to their congressmen and request the passage of a bill in the U. S. Congress concerning the making of captioned films for the deaf. This bill was approved and signed but because of the lateness of its passage no appropriations were made available. It is hoped that the next budget will provide the necessary funds to carry out this project.

School Enrollment Increases

On September 8, at 9 a.m., the entire school staff assembled in the Social Hall for the official opening of the school year.

As is his custom, Dr. Brill welcomed everyone and restated the purpose and aims of the school. Following his remarks, all staff members were introduced by their immediate supervisors.

Because of this year's increase in enrollment (503 as compared to last year's 426), there has been an increase in our entire staff. The additional personnel include ten teachers, ten counselors, two food assistants, three janitors, one stationary engineer and one groundsman. Last spring an additional senior counselor position was added so there are now three people serving in that capacity.

Our present building program nears completion as we look forward to the erection of a new gym. This construction will begin as soon as bids are processed and accepted. We began this school year with eleven additional academic classrooms and two dormitories. These buildings are being utilized by our youngest children.

This increase in our school population entails not only a tremendous administrative load, but also additional responsibilities for each member of the staff. The housing and education of 503 handicapped children is a task requiring specific training for the job plus an abundance of physical energy, a great supply of common sense and, above all, an understanding of the particular problems involved. Assuming that each member of the staff possessed the above qualifications to the point of perfection, without parental cooperation and sympathy, it would be extremely difficult to maintain a smoothly operating, functional school.

The history of this school is too short for its effectiveness to have been measured to any great extent. It can only be felt now by the pride the school feels in its graduates and the pride those graduates feel in their school.

The CAD Convention

The California Association of the Deaf held a convention at Fresno last August 28, 29 and 30. The association did a lot of business, especially in revising its by-laws. Dr. Stevenson of the Berkeley School spoke at the opening day reception, and Dr. Brill spoke at the Saturday night banquet. Mayor Arthur Sel-land made Toivo Lindholm, who was the association's president, honorary mayor of Fresno for one day, August 29, and awarded him a certificate to that effect. The deaf of Northern California won the Sacto Keg for another two years.

The new officers elected are: Herb Schreiber of Los Angeles, president; Lawrence Newman, first vice president; Emmette Simpson of Napa, second vice president; Felix Kowalewski, executive secretary (re-elected); Imogene Guire, San Bernardino, recording secretary; Lawrence Ramger, Berkeley School, treasurer; Toivo Lindholm, director (to serve out Mr. Simpson's unexpired term); B. B. Burnes of the Berkeley School, Mrs. Jerry Fall of Long Beach, Clyde Houze of El Cajon, new directors to serve four years. Hold-over directors are Ray Stallo of Colton and Mrs. Winona Chick of Sacramento.

Inside Alaska with Turechek, Gover and the "Mighty Volkswagen"

June 23 saw the departure of Mr. Turechek and Mr. Gover from Riverside on a journey that took them through Glacier National Park, Edmonton and Dawson Creek, Canada, over the Alaska Highway to Fairbanks and Anchorage. They returned to Riverside twenty-one days later and had covered 8,200 miles.

Highlights of the trip:

Stuck in the mud for seven hours at Dawson Creek.

Being in Alaska at the time the U. S. voted to make it a state.

Anchoring themselves down each night so the mosquitoes couldn't carry them off.

Many people tried to pull out the boat, but they gave up. Then they called a man to get a car. The man fastened a rope to the boat and pulled it out with his car. The boat and motor were full of water. The boat had a plug in the bottom of it, and Bob's friend drained it. The motor was destroyed.

Busy Summer Bees

When summer vacation began on June 13, almost everyone gave a sigh of relief in getting away from school work and duties for a while. However, while many students had fun in taking short or long trips, a good number of the older students found jobs for part of the summer or all summer.

These three boys worked on farms. Gilbert Ortega drove a tractor which picked up beets and dumped them into trucks. John Soto worked in Hemet on a date farm laying out boards on which dates dried in the sun. Elmer Anderson did several things: cutting logs, putting up fences, feeding the cows and picking figs from trees.

George Mangum worked with his father at the Methodist Conference Camp in Wrightwood putting in water pipes and cleaning cabins.

Also working with his father, Paul Geyer cleaned floors and plastered walls in Lutheran churches in Monterey Park and Pomona.

Mark McCrory lay edging for floor coverings at Tak-Track Co.

John Darby worked in a Del Mar cafe washing dishes by machine, of course!

Delivering newspapers at Long Beach was Peter Natale's job.

Jimmy Davidson and Ron Casselman worked at the American Canvas Company. Ron ironed patches on torn tents as did Jimmy who also made tents using a large sewing machine.

Being a good swimmer, James Thompson was with the American Red Cross life saving class, teaching small children how to swim at the pool in Shamel Park.

Away from home Henry Barnes was a bus boy at Harrah's Club in Stateline, Nevada.

Robert Coats worked at Airmark Plastics Corporation running plastic tabs on a sandblaster.

Dennis Kaufman enjoyed the outdoors, taking care of the lawn and shrubberies at a friend's house while she was on vacation for two months.

Working in a Convair department Ronald Boughton cleaned machine parts by dipping them in an acid solution.

At the Farm Fair market in Buena Park Tom Utley put vegetables in bags.

Fred Sweetland was at the Gardena Dairy Farms as a milk bottle washer operator and can cleaner.

For two months Harry Von Meeden worked in a school library. He carried books from the library to trucks.

Philip Gutierrez worked in a store stocking shelves and sweeping the floor.

At Accor Metalcraft Richard Cato cut metal on a machine.

Pat Zvada worked at a leather and canvas company making bags.

That's all about the boys; now what about the girls? Oh, they were not to be outdone; some landed jobs, too.

In her home town, Coachella, Socorro Loreda had a back-breaking job, picking cotton bolls.

Etta Smith and Judy Peters worked at Robinson Co. in Beverly Hills. Etta wrapped purchases as gift packages, and Judy wrapped the packages to be sent out.

Dot Hottinger stayed close by the family, wrapping meat at the Hottinger Frozen Food Locker in Chino.

Carol Lee Wales worked at the First State Bank in Lyndale. She used the adding machine and also sorted and filed checks.

Mollie Roquemore was in the hot sun working in a potato field.

Karen Roach didn't have to go far to work. She stayed right at home typing 125 addresses a day for an insurance man.

Mary Bumbarger washed dishes in a restaurant near her home in Rivera.

And too numerous to mention, there were many girls who were baby sitters.

Oh, for the Life of a Senior

You think it's swell to be a senior? Oh . . . yes . . . but you should see how busy the CSDR seniors are!

Since the start of school they have had class meetings every Tuesday afternoon. Class officers were elected at the first meeting. At the next one, the Scarlet and Gray staff was formed. These weekly meetings are important for making and carrying out plans for earning money and for other activities.

At recess each school day teams of seniors are at their stations selling candy. In addition, delicious golden crumbles candy from the Kathryn Beich confectionery is on sale at several places on the campus. A large album of Christmas cards is being passed around and sample boxes of Christmas cards are on display. The Senior Class is taking orders through November.

The first once-a-month car wash was held on Saturday, September 20. By the day's end a total of twenty-four cars had been spruced up.

On Friday evening, October 3, the seniors, with the help of twelve other boys and girls, had concessions at Riverside City College's first home football game. The large crowd on hand really had the CSDR vendors hustling back and forth through most of the game. With three City College home games to be played, the seniors are bound to earn a tidy sum of money for the class fund.

CSDR had its first home football game October 10. The seniors were on the job, selling hot dogs, coffee and cold drinks.

If you do not know who the members of the Class of 1959 are, you can spot them by the precious pieces of jewelry they acquired recently and are wearing.

Over forty-five boys reported the opening day of the third CSDR football season. This season should prove to be the most promising in Cub history. There is a show of hustle and enthusiasm during even the toughest practice sessions which indicates a greatly improved year. Blocking and tackling, the two skills necessary for a good football team, are becoming harder and sharper. Players are going about their duties with spirit and determination to succeed.

There is only one senior, Jack Salisbury, on the squad; all of the others are due to return for at least one more year. If our boys continue to learn and improve during this five game season, we can expect next year to be even better.

First team line-up:

Left Tackle—Joel Bellavia, Sophomore. Blocking and tackling greatly improved, sometimes forgets to stay low in the line.

Center—Russell Thexton, Junior. An experienced player, could be one of the toughest players on the squad with more hustle and drive.

Right Tackle—Melvin Turner, Junior. Should develop into a good player with more attentiveness to his duties.

Right Guard—James Thompson, Sophomore. Outstanding blocker when determined.

Right End—Dennis Kaufman, Sophomore. A hustler, blocks and tackles well, needs more practice on catching passes.

Left Halfback—Jack Salisbury, Senior. A leader and team captain, speedy and tricky ball carrier, needs more practice in tackling.

Fullback—Bill Ramborger, Freshman. Blocks and tackles aggressively, fair ball carrier, occasionally fumbles.

Quarterback—Mark McCrory, Sophomore. Ball handling fair, accurate short passer. Footwork could be sharper.

Right Halfback—Don Winant, Junior. Best ball handler, fakes handoffs well, best pass-receiver on team.
